

Contents

CHAPTER	PAGE
Dedication	(iii)
Preface	(v)
Foreword	(vii)
Acknowledgment	(ix)

PART I

- 1. Introduction 1—8
Ancient knowledge about magnets—Magneto-therapy—a science and an art—in advanced countries. Purpose of the book—Suggestion of standard method—Use of magnets upheld by Homocopathy—Naturopathy.
- 2. Discovery of Magnetism 9—14
Reference of magnets in Vedas—Relevant Mantras with english translation—Discovery of magnet in modern times—First treatise on Magnetochemistry in India—Magnet as known in different languages.
- 3. Magnetism in the Universe 15—22
Earth as a huge natural magnet—Nature of Earth's magnetism—Sources of Magnetism of Earth—Earths's magnetic effect on human beings—Magnetism in the other Astral bodies.

PART II

- 4. Effect of Magnetism on Living Organism 23—39
General Influence on living being—Important conclusions—Results of experiments in U.S.A.—Results of experiments in Russia—Experiments on Animals—Results of experiments in Japan—Experiments in U.K.—Effect of Magnetism on Plant life—Effect of Magnetism on Animal life—Effect of Magnetism on Human life.

5. Human Magnetism

40—47

Ancient philosophy—Magnetic powers of great personalities—Personal magnetism—Mesmer and his Mesmerism—Magnetism, psychoanalysis and psychiatry.

6. Human Body—An Automatic Machine with Magnetic Properties

48—55

Brain and Heart—most important parts of human machinery—Human Brain and its functions—Human Heart and its function—Magnetic fields in Human body.

7. Role of Blood in Human Body

56—67

Composition of blood—Blood circulation—Clotting of blood—Heart (cor or cordia)—Action of heart—Diseases of heart—Blood pressure—Functions of blood—If the blood stops circulating, the organism dies.

PART III

8. How Magnets Affect Human Metabolism

68—79

Different theories of biological effects—The most popular theory—Action of magnetic flux on blood—Action on Hormone Secretion—Pituitary Gland Regulates Height—Reformation and resuscitation of cells—Heart and Geomagnetic Activity—Acceleration of self-curative powers—Summary of beneficial influence of magnets.

9. Magnet and its Composition 80—89

Natural magnets and artificial magnets—Electromagnets and permanent magnets—Different shapes, sizes, designs and strength—Classification of magnetic materials—Ceramic magnets—Magnetisation and magnetic poles—Established laws of Magnetism—Power of magnets—Various qualities of a magnet.

PART IV

10. Technique of Application of Magnets 90—130

Different poles have different effect on human body—Mode of application—North Pole—South Pole—Local treatment—General treatment—Electricity and Magnetism—Electrotherapy and Magnetotherapy—Standard lead technique of ECG—Five methods of application of magnets—Technique of contact with magnets—Some simple tests to perceive magnetic force—Treatment of diseases—Selection of magnets—Seating of patients—Peculiar manifestations—Duration of application of magnets—Different ways of application of magnets—Guidelines and precautions for use of magnets—Techniques of application of magnets in the treatment of 150 common diseases.

11. Magnetised Water 131—140

Characteristics of water—Influence of magnetic field on properties of water—Useful results of experiments with magnetised water—Beneficial effects of magnetised water on human beings—Magnetised water helps in all diseases—Milk can be magnetised and made more potential—

Preparation of magnetised water—Dosage of magnetised water—Russian way of magnetising water—American way of magnetising water—Magnetic treatment of water in Japan.

PART V

12. Advantages of Magnetotherapy

141—152

Strong medicines have strong reactions—Magnetotherapy is a natural treatment—Magnetic touch accelerates blood circulation—Magnetic treatment is beneficial for light conditions as well as for serious diseases—Beneficial for all ages and both sexes—Very quick relief in some cases—No preparations—No recurring Expenditure—Saving of Time—No Habit Forming—Magnets keep their users fresh, energetic and youthful—Effectively draws pain out of the body—Precautionary and Prophylactic use of magnets—Side effects—Magnetic treatment—beneficial for people of all humours and characteristic.

13. Magnet as a preventive Device

153—157

Good health is the noblest gift of God—Prevention is better than cure—Use of magnet as a preventive device—Application of magnet—Curative as well as preventive.

PART VI

14. Experiences of Indian Magnetotherapists 159—221

Some cases treated by Dr R.S. Thacker of Delhi—Some of the cases treated by the author—Magnetic treatment of cancer—Magnetotherapy claimed to be rational cure for cancer—

Experiences of Dr M.T. Santwani—Experiences of Dr A.C. Gupta—Experiences of Dr M.C. Verma, Experiences of Dr A.K. Gupta—Experiences of Dr P.K. Roy, M.B.B.S.—Experiences of Dr K.P.V. Menon—Experiences of Dr M. Srinivasa Rao—Experiences of Dr D.S. Murty—Experiences of Dr N.S. Bengali—Experiences of Shri G.C. Puri—Experiences of Dr Satram Das Lilani—Experiences of Dr S.C. Gupta—Experiences of Shri Ram Bilas Shukla.

15. Clinical Reports from Foreign Countries 222—231

Reports from some companies of Japan—Reports from the United States of America—Cases treated by Dr Howard D. Stangle, of New York—Experiences of Dr Albert Roy Davis of Florida, America—Reports from Russia—Reports from Italy—Reports from Scandinavia—Reports from France—Reports from Australia.

PART VII

16. Magnetotherapy and Homoeopathy 233—246

Magnetotherapy closely allied to Homoeopathy—Dr Hahnemann and Mesmer were contemporaries—Observations of Hahnemann about use of magnets—Three medicines prepared in Homoeopathy from the magnets cover 1243 Symptoms—Dr Allen writes a great deal about these medicines—Details of 50 major symptoms of the three remedies.

17. Magnetotherapy and Acupuncture or Acupressure 247—252

Acupuncture—Ancient Chinese Art of Healing—Acupuncture points—Various ways of stimulating the points—Certain Clinical cases—Acupressure—Suggestion for utilising acupuncture points in Magnetotherapy.

- 18. Magnetotherapy and Naturopathy 253—264.
 Branches of Naturopathy—State recognition to Naturopathy—Chromotherapy—Method of preparation of Solar Medicines—Gemtherapy—The origin of disease—How gems cure diseases—How gems are used in Gemtherapy—Magnetotherapy helps in Meditation—Points of similarity between Magnetotherapy and Naturopathy—Some preferential points in Magnetotherapy—Conclusion.

PART VIII

- 19. Terminology 265—269.
 Technical terms relating to Magnet and Magnetism.
- 20. Availability of magnets 270—271
 Cast-Alloy magnets and Ceramic magnets
- 21. List of References 272—274
- Index 275—284